Beginning near the first entrance and running west along the enclosure are the poultry coops, next to these pens for hogs, then sheep. At the northwest corner of the grounds begin the horse sheds and extend about one-fourth around, and immediately following are the cattle sheds, reaching to near the main stand at the south of the The only fair criticism of an obany part of the arrangements is the narrowness of the horse stalls and lack of facilities offered to parties seeking egress. Having given you a brief but full description of the grounds and offered my censorious remark, I proceed to speak of the articles on exhibition. First, fruits.
